

Henrico County loses 'pillars of strength'

Glover, Kaechele remembered for service, dedication to community

Henrico County recently lost a pair of dedicated public servants — two “pillars of strength” for the community — in a span of just two weeks.

Board of Supervisors Chairman and Brookland District Supervisor Richard W. Glover, 82, died Feb. 2. Former Three Chopt District Supervisor David A. Kaechele, who retired from the position after his term ended in 2015, passed away Jan. 20. He was 85.

Between them, Mr. Glover and Mr. Kaechele served 65 years on Henrico’s board, helping to guide the community through a period of rapid growth. Their leadership further established Henrico as a model local government based on sound fiscal policies, one of the lowest tax rates among Virginia’s urban localities and quality services, from public safety to schools to recreation.

County Manager John A. Vithoulkas reflected on losing two “pillars of strength” for Henrico in a Feb. 3 email to employees that announced Mr. Glover’s passing.

“This obviously has been a difficult time for all of us,” he wrote. “In the days and weeks ahead, please think of our recent losses and take the opportunity to do something good within our community.

“Do this from your heart — do it for Dick and Dave.” ■

David A. Kaechele, 1931-2017

David A. Kaechele, who served on the Henrico County Board of Supervisors for 36 years — longer than any other member under the county’s modern form of government — died Jan. 20 at his daughter’s home in Henrico. He was 85.

Mr. Kaechele, a native of Allegan, Mich. and a graduate of Michigan State University, was a retired development engineer for Reynolds Metals Co. and a veteran of the U.S. Army and Korean War.

He joined the Board of Supervisors in 1980 after winning election to an open seat in the Three Chopt District. He represented the western district before retiring at the end of his

A champion of exceptional public facilities, Mr. Glover provided key support for the openings of Glen Allen Stadium at RF&P Park in 2007 (upper middle) and Libbie Mill Library in 2015 (upper right).

David A. Kaechele, 1931-2017: Former Three Chopt District Supervisor David A. Kaechele, who helped manage and guide Henrico from 1980 until his retirement in 2015, died Jan. 20. Mr. Kaechele served nine terms, longer than any other supervisor under Henrico’s modern form of government. Praised as a calm, steady leader, he was a fixture at countless meetings and special events, including the openings of the Glen Allen Stadium at RF&P Park in 2007 (left), Libbie Mill Library in 2015 (upper middle) and Twin Hickory Area Library in 2007 (upper right).

ninth term in December 2015. “The spirit of David A. Kaechele is with us ... in this county. It’s with this Board of Supervisors, as those that came before have established a strong foundation for our county,” County Manager John A. Vithoulkas said Jan. 23 in remarks opening his State of the County address at the Cultural Arts Center at Glen Allen. Vithoulkas then asked the audience of business and community leaders to share a moment of silence — one of many recent tributes to a man described as a “consummate gentlemen” and tireless public servant. The Henrico flag was lowered to half-staff at all county facilities in the week after Mr. Kaechele’s death. During his 36 years on the Board of Supervisors, Mr. Kaechele helped to guide Henrico and Three Chopt during a period of tremendous growth and change. Once mostly rural, the Three Chopt area is now a hub of activity, with Innsbrook and other corporate centers, a variety of retailers, restaurants, hotels and housing types. Mr. Kaechele’s résumé includes nine appointments as chairman and eight as vice chairman of Henrico’s board as well as dozens of appointments to local, regional, state and national boards and commissions. After retiring as supervisor, he continued to represent Henrico on the Richmond Metropolitan Transportation Authority. The Henrico School Board honored Mr. Kaechele’s service in 2012 in the naming of David A. Kaechele Elementary School, which opened in fall 2013 on Pouncey Tract Road. He received the 2015 Henrico County Leader of the Year Award from the Henrico Business Council of the Greater Richmond Chamber, which is now ChamberRVA, as well as a resolution of commendation from the 2016 Virginia House of Delegates. The House of Delegates adjourned Jan. 24 in “honor and memory” of Mr. Kaechele, following his funeral that morning at Tuckahoe Presbyterian Church, where he had served as an elder, deacon and treasurer. Members of the Henrico Police Division, Division of Fire and Sheriff’s Office lined the funeral procession route as a final salute from the community. “Today was a day of grief for our county,” Vithoulkas told the Board of Supervisors later that evening, “but ultimately, as was noted at the service, Mr. Kaechele had a life that was well lived.” Mr. Kaechele was preceded in death by his wife of 49 years, Marilyn. His survivors include friend Erna van den Nieuwenhuizn; daughters Kathy Kaechele Raouf and Karen Kaechele Costantino; and five grandchildren. ■

County Manager John A. Withoukaskas ordered the Henrico flag to remain at half-staff at all county facilities for the week following his death.

“It is with a very heavy heart that I report to you the passing of Mr. Richard W. Glover,” Withoukaskas wrote to county employees in a Feb. 3 email. “Mr. Glover had a passion for our County, the Brookland District, all things planning and zoning, and youth athletics. He was driven by his faith and his commitment to his family. He demanded much from us, and we are all better public servants because of him.”

Mr. Glover was a native of Victoria and a veteran of the U.S. Navy who attended Virginia Commonwealth University and J. Sargeant Reynolds Community College. He served on Henrico’s Planning Commission from 1984 to 1986. He joined the Board of Supervisors in January 1988 and was re-elected seven times by Brookland District voters.

He was recognized for his expansive knowledge of Henrico and attention to details of the county budget. Among the many projects he championed were the Cultural Arts Center at Glen Allen, the Glen Allen Stadium at RF&P Park and Greenwood Park, which is under development.

Mr. Glover’s résumé includes six appointments as chairman and four as vice chairman of Henrico’s board. He also held positions on many national, statewide and regional governmental organizations, including the National Association of Counties’ Community, Economic and Workforce Development Steering Committee, the Virginia Association of Counties’ Economic Development and Planning Steering Committee and the Richmond Regional Planning District Commission. He also served on the county’s Board of Social Services.

Mr. Glover was a lifetime member of the Hermitage High School Band and Auxiliary Boosters and the Glen Allen Youth Athletic Association and Hall of Fame. He was a member of Grove Avenue Baptist Church.

His survivors include his wife, Joan Sadler Glover; sons Gerald W. Glover and R. Joseph Glover; daughters Donna G. Parrish and Karen G. Glasco; and 11 grandchildren. ■

Henrico rolls out first dedicated bike lanes on 1.6 miles of road

Lanes follow Park Terrace Drive in Wellesley

As warmer temperatures draw them out this spring, bicycling enthusiasts in Henrico County may find a new route worth exploring.

The Department of Public Works (DPW) recently marked bike lanes along 1.6 miles of Park Terrace Drive, off Lauderdale Drive in the Wellesley community. They’re the first dedicated bike lanes that are part of a Henrico roadway.

The county also offers various trails and shared-use paths, including one along North Gayton Road in western Henrico.

Last May, the county opened a 0.4-mile trail that connects Dorey Park to the Virginia Capital Trail where it cuts through eastern Henrico. The Division of Recreation and Parks has preliminary plans to open a 1-mile extension of the connector trail around mid-2018.

“We hope to have more,” DPW Director Steven J. Yob said generally of bike lanes. “People certainly request them a lot.”

The bike lanes on Park Terrace made sense because the road isn’t heavily traveled and excess pavement width was available. Park Terrace was designed to accommodate parking on the street, but that seldom occurs because no home has frontage along the road, according to DPW.

As it’s now configured, Park Terrace features a 6-foot-wide bike lane on each side of the road. Narrow buffer strips shield riders from the road’s two travel lanes for vehicles. The posted speed limit on Park Terrace is 35 miles per hour.

As more bicyclists prepare to venture out, police encourage riders as well as motorists to look out for each other, be courteous and obey all traffic laws.

Virginia law requires any driver of a vehicle to provide at least 3 feet of clearance on the right whenever passing or overtaking any bicycle headed in the same direction. Similarly, bicyclists must obey all traffic laws for vehicles when they’re on a road.

“If there’s a stop sign, a bicycle must stop,” said Lt. Dieter Merz, commander of the traffic enforcement unit of the Henrico Police Division. “They are a vehicle, and they are required to adhere to the traffic regulations.”

Police also encourage bicyclists to wear helmets and other safety equipment as well as to use hand signals to communicate their planned turning movements.

In 2016, 37 vehicle collisions with bicycles occurred in Henrico, which resulted in 44 injuries and one fatality, according to the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles. The crash total was the highest of any year since at least 2010. ■

Henrico initiates survey to assess how residents want information

Where do you go to get your news and information about Henrico County?

Do you look to local media outlets, the henrico.us website, or the county's Twitter handle @HenricoNews? Do you watch the original programming on HCTV or pick up publications such as Henrico Today and the county's Annual Report?

Henrico is seeking residents' opinions on the county's communication efforts — what works, what could be improved, what could be done differently — as it works to provide information to residents as effectively as possible.

Henrico has hired Responsive Management of Harrisonburg to conduct a telephone survey of county residents. The company will contact 500 residents, chosen at random, in each magisterial district. Calls will be made to land lines and cell phones and will take about 10 minutes.

Survey calls should indicate "Responsive Management" on a phone's caller identification, though they may also register as "not available." Calls will originate from the 540 Virginia area code.

The survey is expected to continue through early April.

Public Relations and Media Services Director Tamra McKinney said the survey will help the county enhance the way it delivers information to residents.

"This survey will help us evaluate the effectiveness of our current efforts and determine the best ways to communicate with our residents," she said. "Their opinions and input will help guide our communication efforts, and we encourage everyone who is contacted to participate."

McKinney noted that the information landscape has changed dramatically since 2004, the last time Henrico conducted a similar countywide survey.

"Twitter didn't exist then, and Facebook was in its infancy," she said. "The idea of social media as a platform for providing 'official' information hadn't taken hold."

"We want to make sure we are keeping pace with the informational needs of our residents," she said. "We appreciate the time and cooperation of everyone who participates in this survey." ■

Walk this way: Crosswalks protect pedestrians in traffic

Police urge caution, courtesy for walkers, motorists

With its roads busier than ever, Henrico County is marking more crosswalks to help motorists and pedestrians safely get where they need to be.

Henrico maintains 394 crosswalks, having marked three new ones and upgraded two others in 2016, said Steven J. Yob, director of the Department of Public Works (DPW).

The new crosswalks are at Gayton and Ryandale roads, Twin Hickory Road and Scots Glen Drive and Westham Parkway and Beechwood Drive in western Henrico.

"We're doing a lot more of them," Yob said. "There's just a lot more people walking. They want to cross the street at a safe location."

Crosswalks feature a pair of solid, parallel white lines — typically 6 or more feet apart — that extend across a street. They're often marked by request in areas with heavy foot traffic, such as near schools, hospitals, shopping centers and parks.

The lines — sometimes complemented by flashing lights and signs — show pedestrians where they can cross safely and advise motorists to remain alert for pedestrians.

DPW prefers to mark crosswalks at intersections, rather than in the middle of a block. "It's more of a natural place for motorists to expect them," Yob said.

So who has the right-of-way in a crosswalk — motorists or pedestrians? Under Virginia law, it usually depends on the road's posted speed limit, said Lt. Dieter Merz, commander of the traffic enforcement unit of the Henrico Police Division.

In general, pedestrians in a crosswalk have the right-of-way on roads posted at 35 miles per hour or less, while vehicles have the right-of-way on roads posted at more than 35 miles per hour.

Regardless of the speed limit, police urge motorists and pedestrians to be courteous and attentive at all times.

"We're seeing a lot of driver distraction and a lot of pedestrian distraction," Merz said. "They're doing a lot on their smartphones, and they're just walking out into the road."

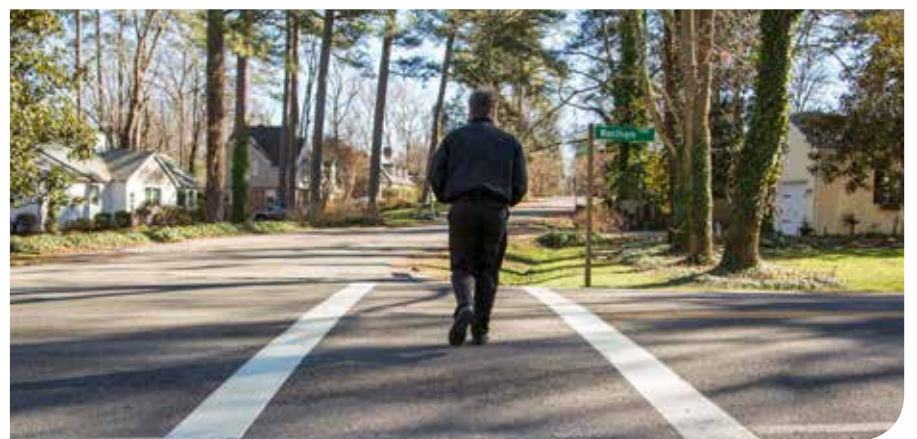

In 2016, 70 vehicle crashes involving pedestrians and seven pedestrian fatalities were reported in Henrico, according to the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles. Those totals were up from 64 crashes and one pedestrian fatality in 2015.

In many instances, pedestrians are getting struck while attempting to cross a high-traffic road, such as West Broad Street, away from a crosswalk or are crossing when they don't have the right-of-way, Merz said.

Even if they do have the right-of-way, pedestrians would be wise to look out for oncoming vehicles.

"When you're a pedestrian, you're

With pedestrian activity on the rise, Henrico is adding crosswalks on many of its roads and is encouraging pedestrians and motorists to remain attentive and courteous of each other.

always going to be on the losing side of a 4,000-pound vehicle that's heading your way," Merz said.

In addition, pedestrians who are out at night are encouraged to stick to well-lit areas and to wear bright or reflective clothing, he said.

Similarly, motorists are advised to remain on alert. "We need to be mindful that we have pedestrians, and we need to accommodate pedestrians," Yob said. "We need to try to make it as safe as possible."

From an enforcement standpoint, the Police Division pays particular attention to school zones. A vehicle recently struck and injured a middle school student who was attempting to cross a street. The incident did not occur in a crosswalk, Merz said.

"We very strictly enforce speed limits in school zones and yielding to students in crosswalks in a school zone," he said.

As pedestrian activity has stepped up in recent years, DPW has taken an inventory of the county's crosswalks as well as obtained equipment to count pedestrian activity.

"We've got more data that shows these things are needed," Yob said of crosswalks. "There's a broad, cross section of our population — mothers with little kids in strollers to senior citizens — who really want to be able to walk for fitness or other reasons." ■

Free tax help available through April 13 for qualifying residents

Libbie Mill, Fairfield libraries hosting metroCASH sites

Eligible Henrico taxpayers — households with incomes of $54,000 or less in 2016 — can receive free assistance with their income tax returns at locations in the county and throughout the metropolitan area.

Henrico County again is teaming with United Way of Greater Richmond & Petersburg to offer free tax assistance through the metroCASH Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program. IRS-certified volunteers will help working families and individuals prepare, file and get the most out of their tax returns.

Residents using the service potentially could enhance their refunds by taking advantage of the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC), a tax benefit for people who earn low to moderate incomes.

Designed to reduce the tax burden and supplement wages, the credit could increase a federal refund by as much as $6,269 for families with three or more children and $506 for individuals.

"These credits can help Henrico families make ends meet, but they must file a tax return to claim them," said Kim Edmonds, Henrico Extension agent for family and consumer sciences who coordinates the county's participation in metroCASH.

"We want more qualifying families to learn about and receive these tax credits," she said. "We also encourage families to take advantage of this free service and avoid paying tax-preparation fees."

To qualify for the EITC, residents must meet the following income requirements for 2016 (the incomes listed are for married couples filing a joint return; in each category, the income limit is $5,550 less for single-parent families):

- Earned less than $53,505, with three or more qualifying children;
- Earned less than $50,198, with two children;
- Earned less than $44,846, with one child; and
- Earned less than $20,430, with no children.

Trained volunteers are available to answer questions and help eligible taxpayers complete and file electronic returns at 13 MetroCASH sites, including Libbie Mill Library and Fairfield Area Library in Henrico.

To receive assistance at a metroCASH site, families and individuals should bring photo identification for each adult in the household; Social Security or Individual Taxpayer Identification Number (ITIN) cards for each person on the tax return, including dependents; forms for all income received in 2016, such as the W-2 and 1099-R; form 1095 demonstrating proof of health insurance; a voided check or deposit slip with account numbers to enable direct deposit of refunds; copies of last year's state and federal returns, if available; and any other tax-related documents.

Edmonds noted that metroCASH participants can benefit from a new feature of the program this year. Filers choosing to save a portion of their refund will be eligible to win cash prizes through the "Save Your Refund" campaign, she said. Information is available at saveyourrefund.com.

volunteers helped more than 3,200 area households file tax returns, generating nearly $900,000 in EITC funds and some $3 million in federal refunds. The free service saved its clients an estimated $654,600 in preparation fees.

The additional funds benefit the local economy as well: more than 80 percent of EITC refund dollars remain in the community where they are received, according to the organization.

Many area residents miss this opportunity, however. Up to 25 percent of eligible taxpayers fail to claim the EITC. ■
